The Movie

A young man struggles to solve the mystery surrounding his catatonic mother and defeat the ultimate evil in the Universe: the villainous Dr. Beau Nerjoose.

Summary

The Unquenchable Thirst for Beau Nerjoose is an instant cult classic. Its hyper-sexualized and over-the-top scenes involving live-action and clay-animated characters lend to its own special brand of humorous insanity, never forgetting the boundless love between a boy and his mother. 96 minutes.

Synopsis

This absurd tale follows an apathetic man-child, Ron, on a journey to restore the spirit of his catatonic mother. Meeting friends along the way, this ridiculous, drug-filled musical expedition uncovers not only the secrets behind his mother's current state, but a mystery surrounding the purpose of the Universe. That's when things really get insane. Between encounters with rectum-dwelling-space-worms, a butt-chugging hobo, masturbating forest animals, a flying penis-helicopter, and a special-needs anti-Christ, Ron must not only save his mother, but also help his new space-nun friends defeat the ultimate cause of his consternation: the villainous Dr. Beau Nerjoose. He also just might fall in love along the way.

Producer, Writer, Director

Johnny Buell has been making short films for most of his life, and The Unquenchable Thirst for Beau Nerjoose is his first feature. Born and raised in Clearwater, FL, Johnny left the sweet life of computer and electrical engineering to tackle the far-too-often untouched genre of the fart musical. Johnny resides in Portland, OR with his wife, daughter, corgi, and Jeff Hammond. He has worked in full-time film production since 2012.

Producer, Writer, Director of Photography

Zach Carter, born and raised in Redding, CA, likes and makes bad movies. He's still a little bummed that he couldn't convince Johnny to shoot The Unquenchable Thirst for Beau Nerjoose on VHS, but he'll get over it. He has a prominent heal-strike which forces him to buy new socks more often than he'd like. He currently resides in Los Angeles with his wife.

Lights

Jeff Hammond, from Olympia, WA, loves light. His dreams consist of soldering wires together and then bursting into flames. Although he sleeps at least 14 hours a day, he is generally asleep even when he is awake. He designs T-shirts for corporate bike-to-work days and this brings him the truest happiness we are capable of having in the human existence. He presently lives in Portland, OR with Johnny Buell, his wife, daughter, and corgi.
